CONCLUSION Managing construction projects is a task that requires skill and concentration. First of all, explain how frequency you provide updates. You can also mention any practical things you follow in projects such as the creation of landmarks and archiving in an organized way, along with more steps based on team leaders, such as keeping the team motivated and making sure That all members are running their jobs for the defined time frames. This determines any changes that can be made in the next sprint, helping management to get team feedback. Proactive members are more likely to anticipate risks and implement solutions to reduce risks. Instead of trying to find answers to things that have not been well, it is important that the focus of retrospective is in the development of ways for the sprint process to work better for them in the next projects.
